

16. WHAT WE LEARN FROM BEES

1.

Dear children, these bees always work in groups and divide their work to get their job done. They believe in group work and cooperation.

Mommy, these bees are so amazing! they are doing different types of work in different groups.

Look at them! Those bees are sucking nectar from the flowers and that group is busy storing it in the bee hive.

Mommy explains the importance of division of labour to her children.

2.

Inayat, all day may not be the same. It is bright today and favourable for the best to collect more food now and save for later. This is called planning.

Mommy, why are the bees working so hard today? They can do the rest tomorrow, can't they?

Mommy explains to Inayat that planning is important to be prepared for hard times.

3.

My dear, the bees believe in sharing. Keeping enough for themselves, they let others use their honey too. They have a big heart, you see!

But all the hard work that the bees put in fades away when humans destroy their hive and take away the stored honey.

Mommy discusses about the nature of sharing.

4.

So my dear, do these bees charm you? Can you tell me what do you learn from them?

Definitely, Mommy. Work should be planned and divided into groups for better results. I will also be prepared for hard these now.

And you need to share things too!

Inayat understands the lesson we got from a bee.
